Past performance is not a reliable indicator of future performance. Markets may develop completely differently in the future. The chart shows how the product has been managed in the past and compares it to its benchmark. Investment returns will fluctuate so that investors' notes, when redeemed, may be worth more or less than their original cost. ETN returns assume that any capital gains have been reinvested. An index's performance is not illustrative of the ETNs's performance. Indices are not securities in which investments can be made. The ETN value is determined at 4:00 PM CET of each business day, and represents the dollar value of one note; it is calculated by taking the total assets linked to the ETN, subtracting total liabilities, and dividing by the total number of notes outstanding. The value is not necessarily the same as the ETNs' intraday trading price. Investors should not expect to buy or sell the ETN at the determined value. Please see the reverse side for important disclaimers.
