Current Nuclear Energy Catalysts

1. Ballooning Electricity Demand

Technology is driving significant growth in demand for electricity. Artificial intelligence, electric vehicles, cloud computing and digital assets are among the structural trends competing for power.

2. Clean and Reliable Power¹

Nuclear has come into focus because of its low emissions profile paired with its consistent output. Nuclear has one of the lowest emissions profiles paired with the highest capacity factor among major energy sources.

3. Global Policy Support

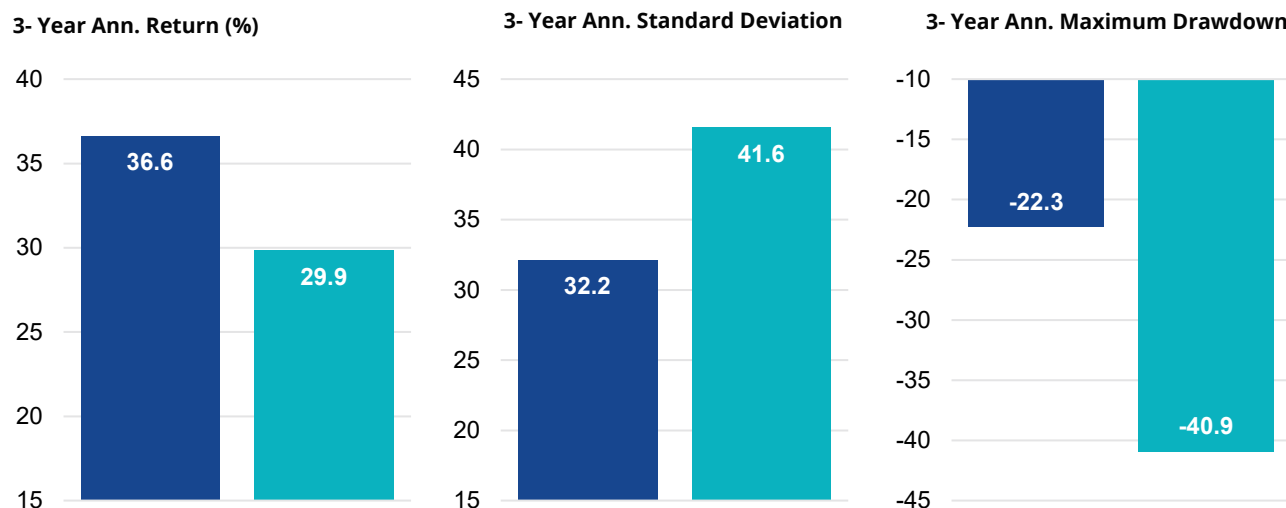

Developed nations globally are again supporting nuclear power led by a renewed focus in the United States. China and other emerging economies continue their strong commitment and are responsible for the most new reactor builds.

Comprehensive Exposure Has Improved Risk/Reward Profile

A comprehensive approach to investing in the nuclear energy ecosystem has helped to reduce the impact of boom-and-bust commodity cycles associated with uranium companies. The MVIS Global Uranium & Nuclear Energy Index has provided stronger returns and much lower volatility and downside risk in recent years compared to an index focused on uranium producers.

DEFINITIONS: North Shore Global Uranium Mining Index is designed to track the performance of companies that are involved in the mining, exploration, development and production of uranium, and that holds physical uranium, uranium royalties or other non-mining assets. MVIS Global Uranium & Nuclear Energy Index tracks the performance of the largest and most liquid companies in the global uranium and nuclear energy industries.

Standard Deviation is a historical measure of the variability of returns relative to the average annual return. A higher number indicates higher overall volatility. Maximum Drawdown measures the largest loss from peak to trough in a certain time period.

VanEck Uranium and Nuclear ETF (NLR) seeks to replicate as closely as possible, before fees and expenses, the price and yield performance of the MVIS Global Uranium & Nuclear Energy Index (MVNLRTR), which is intended to track the overall performance of companies involved in: (i) uranium (ii) the construction, engineering and maintenance of nuclear power facilities and nuclear reactors; (iii) the production of electricity from nuclear sources; or (iv) providing equipment, technology and/or services to the nuclear power industry.
