Metals are Critical to Decarbonizing the World

Rare earth and strategic metals are essential components in many of today's rapidly growing clean energy technologies – from wind turbines and electricity networks to electric vehicles.

Demand for these metals is expected to grow quickly as clean energy transitions gather pace; However, there is a looming mismatch between the world's strengthened climate ambitions and the availability of critical metals. This mismatch may lead to opportunity for those companies involved in the production of these necessary metals.

Why REMX?

- One-Trade Access to the Rare Earth & Strategic Metals Industry
 Many of the world's most advanced technologies rely on rare earth & strategic metals
- Pure Play, Comprehensive, Global Exposure
 Companies must derive at least 50% of total revenues from the rare earth/strategic metals industry to be added to the Index and may include A-shares issued by Shanghai-listed companies trading via Shanghai-Hong Kong Stock Connect
- Industry Known for Volatility
 Rapidly changing supply and demand dynamics, government defense implications, and heavy China involvement have driven significant volatility in the industry historically

Notes: Demand from other sectors was assessed using historical consumption, relevant activity drivers and the derived material intensity. Neodymium demand is used as indicative for rare earth elements. STEPS = Stated Policies Scenario, an indication of where the energy system is heading based on a sector-by-sector analysis of today's policies and policy announcements; SDS = Sustainable Development Scenario, indicating what would be required in a trajectory consistent with meeting the Paris Agreement goals.
